

Deborah has been in charge of Creative Diversity Network since 2016.

Through Creative Diversity Network, Deborah is working to make sure film and television companies include disabled people.

Deborah created the British Film Institute Diversity standards.

These are a set of rules that films and television programmes must follow if they want to get money from the British Film Institute to help make their film.

The rules are about including people from different backgrounds, like disabled people.

Deborah has won lots of awards for her work.
